1. Overview

Hold Mail temporarily stops mail delivery at your home or business address when you're not there to receive it. The service gives you peace of mind, knowing that your mail is safely stored at a Canada Post facility and not left unattended in your mailbox.

We'll deliver your mail the next business day after your return.

This service doesn't apply to parcels. You should ask parcel senders to delay shipping until your return.

2. Eligibility

You're eligible for Hold Mail service if your residential or business address is in Canada.

3. Getting started

You must buy Hold Mail service at least 3 business days before you want us to hold your mail.

You'll need a government-issued photo ID and proof of authorization if you're ordering on behalf of another person.

If you provide an email address, we'll send you confirmation including service details and a reference number. You can use the reference number to extend or make changes to your service.

To buy online

1. Enter your address and ID information.
2. Choose the hold start and end dates.
3. Pay with your credit card.

To buy at a post office:

1. Fill out an order form at home to save time at the post office.

2. Visit your nearest post office.
3. Show your ID and form.
4. Pay.

Please note:

- If your personal ID doesn't have a matching address, you're required to provide additional ID or documentation.

4. ID requirements

You always need to show personal identification to purchase the Hold Mail service.

9. Restrictions

Hold Mail service isn't available for people receiving mail through a shared delivery location such as a:

- Business
- Hospital
- Hotel/motel
- Rooming house
- Nursing home
- School or similar institution
- Dormitory
- Location where several businesses share the same address
- FlexDelivery address
- Automated Parcel Locker

Hold Mail service also isn't available for mail received through a privately administrated mailbox company.

Other Hold Mail restrictions

- You can only use the "all residents" option if no resident at the address needs to receive mail during the hold mail period.
- The "all residents" option isn't available for customers receiving mail through a rural route address (an address containing the R.R. indicator, followed by a number).

- We use the “some residents” option to hold mail for specific people. You must provide the first and last name of each person.
- When we receive conflicting instructions about a specific address or customer (for example, in the instance of a dissolved marriage, business, or cohabitation), we need a court order or a signed, written agreement bearing the signature of all the involved parties. The agreement or court order must specify delivery instructions for personally addressed items and for jointly addressed items.
- We reserve the right to change the service option to “some residents” or cancel the service should you impede mail delivery for other mail recipients at the address.
- You can't change the Hold Mail address after the service has started.

10. Returning early

During the Hold Mail period, mail pickup isn't available at any Canada Post location. To resume mail delivery to your address before the Hold Mail service expires, you must cancel the service.

We'll deliver your held mail to you the next business day, and normal mail delivery will resume. If there's too much held mail for us to deliver, we'll leave a delivery notice card and you must pick up the mail at the post office.

11. Mail still delivered after Hold Mail activation

If mail is still being delivered after we activate your Hold Mail service, check your Hold Mail request to see if:

- The start date has passed
- or
- The names listed match the names on your mail and that you list all names or businesses

You can update the names in your request online if you provided an email address when you made your request. Otherwise, you must do so at a post office and show valid ID.

If these reasons don't explain why you're still receiving mail, you can fill out a service ticket¹.

¹ You may notice the service ticket is called "Mail Forwarding," but it also works for Hold Mail
